

Brexit: All you need to know for VAT and Customs

The Baker Tilly International Indirect Tax Committee invites you to our 2020 virtual client event covering all you need to know for your business from a VAT and Customs perspective.

If the UK is to be treated as a non-EU country for VAT and Customs purposes, the principle of free movement of goods will no longer apply. Businesses will face huge changes and challenges to the rules on trading after December 31, 2020. Trading and moving goods between the UK and the EU and vice versa will become subject to import and export formalities. Moving goods could lead to obligations, however this does not automatically mean that those obligations will arise for every company involved. Therefore, it is important to determine your role in the supply chain and the associated obligations. In addition for example special VAT facilities currently in place will no longer apply, are you already aware of those?
